Belgrade Reported in Flames as Greeks Halt Invaders

HITLER'S HIGH COMMAND ADMITS ADVANCES IN BALKAN NATIONS ARE MEETING HARD RESISTANCE

BULLETIN

Bern, Switzerland, April 7.—(AP)—Advices reaching here tonight said that German forces had not captured any strategic points at the end of the second day of the Nazi smashes on a 750-mile front into Greece and Yugoslavia.

By The Associated Press

Greek troops were reported to have withstood violent new assaults today in the second day of Adolf Hitler's invasion of the Aegean kingdom; while in Yugoslavia, target of a twin Nazi thrust, the Germans claimed an advance of 18 to 25 miles.

The direction of the German advance into Yugoslavia had been within 50 miles striking distance of Belgrade, the Yugoslav capital.

Athens dispatches said Greek infantrymen were holding fast amid furious attacks in narrow Macedonian mountain passes littered with German dead and the wreckage of 10 Nazi tanks.

The Greek High Command said the German Palm Sunday invasion had been stopped with the loss of only a single fort.

Dispatches from Bern, Switzerland, quoted the Yugoslav radio as saying that Yugoslav artillery had opened fire along the Albanian frontier, preparing for an attack on Italian-held Albania.

"The enemy, having made some progress, was stopped all along the front," the Greek High Command announced.

Berlin gave a different picture. Without disclosing definite gains, Hitler's High Command said that the Nazi advance into both Balkan nations was "proceeding on schedule against stubborn resistance."

The Germans said Yugoslavia's capital, Belgrade, had been subjected to a fourth heavy bombing attack during the night and left aflame.

DNB, the official German news agency, quoted the Bulgarian air command as saying Yugoslav bombers had attacked the open cities of Sofia and Kustendil, Bulgaria, killing several women and children.

Hitler's High Command listed "enemy" plane losses in the opening day of the new conflict at 102, including 35 bagged in aerial combat.

Italy joined in the hostilities. The Fascist air force reported it had bombed the Yugoslav naval bases of Split and Cattaro, an arsenal and an air base.

Turkey remained neutral as German Panzer divisions stormed into neighboring Greece, but the official Turkish radio declared Germany's given reasons for the attack "do not satisfy anyone."

"It is apparent who brought war to the Balkans," the radio said, adding that German strategy appeared to be aimed at Yugoslavia's "waist"—the important rail junction city of Nis in the Vardar river valley—in the hope of slicing Yugoslavia in two.

Soviet Russia, linked to Yugoslavia by a newly-signed pact of friendship and non-aggression, likewise remained calm, but the newspaper Izvestia commented that Yugoslavia's efforts to secure peace "could not help but arouse the sympathy of the Soviet Union."

An American radio correspondent for CBS in Ankara, Turkey, reported that the Greeks counter-attacked Hitler's invading legions, "threw the Germans back and at one point are on Bulgarian soil."

Dispatches from Switzerland said it was understood the Bulgarian army of 300,000 troops had joined the Germans in the attack on Greece.

First reports to reach Berlin from the Yugoslav front—virtually cut off from communication with the outside world—said Nazi shock troops encountered heavy machine-gun fire from camouflaged Yugoslav bunkers on the heights flanking the Mur river.

"The storm broke loose in blitz fashion," a Nazi reporter said, asserting that the Yugoslav bunkers were quickly silenced by German artillery.

The Greeks reported they were standing firm in the vital Struma river valley, but the German report said they were retreating.

Lancaster, April 7.—(P)—Dr. John Ahlum Schaeffer, 54, sixth president of Franklin and Marshall College, died last night apparently while reading in bed. The High Command mentioned no places where borders were crossed, so there was no possibility of outlining the front, even tentatively.

Primary Objective Of Britain's Force In Greece Is To Drive Fascists From Albania

London, April 7.—The primary objective of Britain's expeditionary force in embattled Greece will be to drive the Italians out of Albania, after which it will seek to hold Greece, Albania and part of Yugoslavia defensively until the time is ripe for a "final offensive," informed observers said.

When this time comes, they said, Britain's "anti-invasion" army at home will be ready to spring across the English channel to open up a second front against the Germans.

The presence in Greece of an Imperial British army of undisciplined strength was admitted officially by Britain for the first time yesterday. At the same time it was announced Britain's air power there had been reinforced.

The British earlier had refirming their promise of full support to Yugoslavia.

(Balkan dispatches began reporting the arrival of British forces at Greek ports last month and subsequent reports said as high as 300,000 troops had been landed with mechanized equipment.)

Military circles declined to say who is in direct command of the British forces in Greece. While the troops were believed to be from General Sir Archibald P. Wavell's Middle East Command, it was not known whether Wavell himself is in Greece. General Sir John G. Dill, chief of the British imperial general staff, is on the ground, however.

Meanwhile a British statement said Great Britain welcomed Yugoslavia "as a resolute and powerful ally" and would fight on her side until "right has been vindicated and law and justice are again enthroned."

BRITISH REPORT FURTHER GAINS IN EAST AFRICA

Mussolini's Empire Appears To Be Rapidly Melting as Imperial Army in Lightning Drive Take Over Ethiopian Capital of Addis Ababa

BATTLE IN THE NORTH

Cairo, Egypt, April 7.—(P)—Premier Mussolini's East African empire appeared today to be rapidly melting away as the British announced their troops in a lightning drive had entered Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital, Fascist legions wrested from tribesmen armed with muskets, spears and clubs five years ago.

It was believed here that the British moved into the capital of ex-Emperor Haile Selassie without resistance, indicating that perhaps 70,000 Italian soldiers had scattered into the mountains and desert to attempt guerrilla warfare or to make a stand somewhere between Addis Ababa and Adduwa to the north.

From North Africa, on the other hand, came reports that a great battle apparently was shaping up east of Bengasi in Libya, as the Italian High Command said German-Italian mechanized troops were continuing east of the Libyan port evacuated by the British last week. The British said "the concentration of our troops is proceeding smoothly."

In East African operations the British reported these developments:

The road to Massaua, the Red Sea port in Eritrea, from fallen Asmara has been cleared and "free French" patrols are within eight miles of the city.

Empire troops continued a march south from Eritrea toward Dessie and Gondar, in Ethiopia.

WEEKEND FATALITIES IN STATE REACH NINE

A soldier walking with a girl friend, a Philadelphia exercising his pet dog and a mother who rescued her three children from fire were among the nine Pennsylvanians killed in accidents over the weekend.

Private Clarence J. Catherman, 20, of Company 1, 109th Infantry, stationed at Indiantown Gap, was struck and killed by an automobile while strolling along a highway at Kulpinport. He was a resident of Milliford.

Frank Scott, 40, was carrying a pet dog across Lancaster avenue in Philadelphia when he was hit by a car. The dog was not injured.

Mrs. Lena Krussick, 31, was fatally burned in a fire in the family home at Shenandoah after she first had aided in getting her three children to safety.

Arthur Johnson, an organizer for the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee, said 130 men were on strike. A company spokesman said only enough men were on duty for maintenance purposes.

Washington, April 7.—(P)—The United States rushed shipments of war supplies to Yugoslavia and Greece today after Secretary of State Hull had denounced Germany's Balkan invasion as "barbaric" and promised that material assistance would be dispatched to the defenders "as speedily as possible."

Indications were that these munitions would be started across the Atlantic, probably in Yugoslav vessels now in American ports, either today or by midweek at the latest. The administration is understood to have been preparing for several days against the hour when Germany would launch her Balkan blitzkrieg.

Included in the shipments may be the 75 millimeter guns which President Roosevelt said last week would be sent to Greece, as well as machine guns, mortars, ammunition, bombs and other supplies drawn from the stores of the United States army.

In addition to these implements of war more than $1,000,000 worth of medical supplies were ordered sent to Yugoslavia. Chairman Norman H. Davis directed the Red Cross to furnish "without delay" 10 field hospitals, tons of medicines and blankets and an initial shipment of 2,000,000 surgical dressings.

Aircraft were not expected to be included in the munitions shipments since Britain's RAF already is operating in the Balkans.

Appearing as the first witness in the committee's investigation of labor conditions in defense industries, the labor secretary said in a statement that there was a danger of "over-emphasizing as well as under-emphasizing" the labor situation in defense industries.

SUSQUEHANNA FLOOD THREAT BEING WATCHED

Some Families in Lowlands Evacuate Homes as Rising River Spills Over Into Portions of the Wyoming Valley

PITTSBURGH RELIEVED

Wilkes-Barre, April 7.—(P)—Some families in the lowlands evacuated their homes today as the rising Susquehanna river spilled over into portions of the Wyoming valley.

A few highways were blocked, some rural buildings endangered and disaster relief organizations given "standby" orders as veteran observers studied reports of a still-rising river at Binghamton, N. Y., near the confluence of the Susquehanna and Shenandoah.

However, at Towanda, 60 miles north of here and south of Binghamton, the stream steadily receded from a crest of 18.4 feet, and the river-wise believed the present swollen stage would pass on before any new rise started, thus averting any serious flood threat.

Heavy rains of last week and melting snows started the river toward flood levels. In the Towanda area, most of the snow has disappeared and in the New York watershed, forecasters said there was not much likelihood of a quick thaw.

Most of Wilkes-Barre, center of a scene of widespread damage and death five years ago, rested secure and dry behind a system of dikes. A crest of 25 feet or slightly higher was expected. Flood stage is 22 feet here.

SUSQUEHANNA FLOOD THREAT BEING WATCHED

Some Families in Lowlands Evacuate Homes as Rising River Spills Over Into Portions of the Wyoming Valley

PITTSBURGH RELIEVED

Wilkes-Barre, April 7—(AP)—Some families in the lowlands evacuated their homes today as the rising Susquehanna river spilled over into portions of the Wyoming valley.

A few highways were blocked, some rural buildings endangered and disaster relief organizations given "standby" orders as veteran observers studied reports of a still-rising river at Binghamton, N. Y., near the confluence of the Susquehanna and Shenango.

However, at Towanda, 60 miles north of here and south of Binghamton, the stream steadily receded from a crest of 18.44 feet, and the river-wise believed the present swollen stage would pass on before any new rise started, thus averting any serious flood threat.

Heavy rains of last week and melting snows started the river toward flood levels. In the Towanda area, most of the snow has disappeared and in the New York watershed, forecasters said there was not much likelihood of a quick thaw.

Most of Wilkes-Barre, center of a scene of widespread damage and death five years ago, rested secure and dry behind a system of dikes. A crest of 25 feet or slightly higher was expected. Flood stage is 22 feet here.

WEEKEND FATALITIES IN STATE REACH NINE

By The Associated Press

A soldier walking with a girl friend, a Philadelphian exercising his pet dog and a mother who rescued her three children from fire were among the nine Pennsylvanians killed in accidents over the weekend.

Private Clarence J. Catherman, 20, of Company 1, 109th Infantry, stationed at Indiantown Gap, was struck and killed by an automobile while strolling along a highway at Kulpsport. He was a resident of Millburg.

Frank Scott, 40, was carrying a pet dog across Lancaster avenue in Philadelphia when he was not by a car. The dog was not injured.

Mrs. Lena Krusnick, 31, was fatally burned in a fire in the family home at Shenandoah after she had died in getting her three children to safety.

HULL SAYS HELP WILL BE RUSHED

Secretary of State Denounces Germany's Balkan Invasion as "Barbaric" and Promises That Material Assistance Will Be Dispatched to Defenders "as Speedily as Possible;" More Than 2,000 Americans in Embattled Country

MINISTER DIRECTED TO STAY ON THE JOB

Washington, April 7—(AP)—The United States rushed shipments of war supplies to Yugoslavia and Greece today after Secretary of State Hull had denounced Germany's Balkan invasion as "barbaric" and promised that material assistance would be dispatched to the defenders "as speedily as possible."

Indications were that these munitions would be started across the Atlantic, probably in Yugoslav vessels now in American ports, either today or by midweek at the latest. The administration is understood to have been preparing for several days against the hour when Germany would launch her Balkan blitzkrieg.

Included in the shipments may be the 75 millimeter guns which President Roosevelt said last week would be sent to Greece, as well as machine guns, mortars, ammunition, bombs and other supplies drawn from the stores of the United States army.

In addition to these implements of war more than $1,000,000 worth of medical supplies were ordered sent to Yugoslavia. Chairman Norman H. Davis directed the Red Cross to furnish "without delay" 10 field hospitals, tons of medicines and blankets and an initial shipment of 2,000,000 surgical dressings.

Aircraft were not expected to be included in the munitions shipments since Britain's RAF already is operating from the RAF base in the British warship in this country.

COMMITTEE IS INVESTIGATING LABOR DISPUTES

Washington, April 7—(AP)—Secretary Perkins expressed the view before the House military affairs committee today that labor and employer had a responsibility to cooperate in avoiding delays and interruptions in defense production.

Appearing as the first witness in the committee's investigation of labor conditions in defense industries, the labor secretary said in a statement that there was a danger of "over-emphasizing as well as under-emphasizing" the labor situation in defense industries.

"We all realize," Miss Perkins said, "that there must be continuity of production in the defense program."

Steel Workers Organizing Committee Issues Statement Saying That Men Will Remain at Their Posts Under Present Contract Until April 15 Halting Walkout That Had Been Called For Midnight Tuesday

ATTENTION DIRECTED TO FORD CONTROVERSY

New York, April 7—(AP)—Drafting of a new labor contract which would send most of the nation's 400,000 idle miners back into the defense-important soft coal mines was temporarily delayed today while labor-management negotiators struggled with a few technical points in a proposed Appalachian wage agreement.

Milwaukee, April 7—(AP)—Members of the CIO plant local ratified today an agreement settling a 76-day strike at the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company, where $45,000,000 in national defense production has been up since Jan. 22.

The United States Steel Corporation and the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee agreed today to continue their wage negotiations, thus averting the threat of an immediate work stoppage in the steel company's mills.

The SWOC issued a statement saying that workers would remain at their posts under the present contract until April 15 and that any changes in wages or working conditions agreed upon in the meantime would be retroactive to April 1. The SWOC previously had called a strike for midnight Tuesday.

MINER TRAPPED FOR 52 HOURS IS RESCUED

Centralia, April 7—(AP)—Eighteen-year-old Joseph Loftus didn't even wince today while hospital nurses changed dressings on his hands worn raw by digging his way out of a coal mine cave-in 60 feet underground where he had been trapped and almost given up for dead for 52 hours.

Except for a deep cut on his head—he was knocked unconscious by a falling timber in the slide which entombed him and a fellow worker last Friday at 11 a. m.—Loftus was pronounced in good condition by doctors.

Miners dug their way to Leonard Burns, 45, on Saturday morning, but had almost abandoned hope for Loftus, who had been working about 40 feet further on.

British Report Further Gains In East Africa

The force which entered Addis Ababa was made up largely of South African troops, part of the columns which fought its way through the Ogaden desert, crossed the Addis Ababa-Jibuti railway and by reaching the capital completed a 1,100-mile march in seven weeks.
Ethiopian "patriots" were reported, in unconfirmed dispatches, to have entered Debra Markos, 120 miles northwest of Addis Ababa, with Haile Selassie as their leader.

The whereabouts of Duke D'Aosta, Italian viceroy of Ethiopia, was not known.
A British broadcast last night said the duke had sent a note of thanks to the British for steps to protect women and children in Addis Ababa.
The British said he may be with any of a number of isolated Italian garrisons holding out in the country.

Blaze Destroys Bus After Crash

State motor police reported the driver, Howard J. Miller, 38, of Philadelphia, had stopped the bus at a Reading Railroad grade crossing just inside the Columbia borough limits, 11 miles west of Lancaster.
The automobile struck the rear drive motor, reversing the fuel line and the leading gasoline ignited. Columbia firemen played water on the gas tank to prevent an explosion.

The bus passengers were taken to Lancaster, transferred to another bus and continued their journey. The bus was enroute from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh.
The operator of the trailer-truck, S. S. Lehigh of York, was uninjured.

Moosic, April 7.—(P)—Experts sifted the ruins of the blasted packing house of the DuPont Company's powder plant today in an effort to determine what touched off the explosion. British Report Further Gains In East Africa

The force which entered Addis Ababa was made up largely of South African troops, part of the columns which fought its way through Italian Somaliland, crossed the Ogaden desert, seized Dire Dawa on the Addis Ababa-Jibuti railway and by reaching the capital completed a 1,100-mile march in seven weeks.

Ethiopian "patriots" were reported, in unconfirmed dispatches, to have entered Delma Markos, 120 miles northwest of Addis Ababa, with Haile Selassie as their leader.

The whereabouts of Duke D'Aosta, Italian viceroy of Ethiopia, was not known.

(A British broadcast last night said the duke had sent a note of thanks to the British for steps to protect women and children in Addis Ababa.)

The British said he may be with any of a number of isolated Italian garrisons holding out in the country.

Blaze Destroys Bus After Crash

State motor police reported the driver, Howard J. Miller, 38, of Philadelphia, had stopped the bus at a Reading Railroad grade crossing just inside the Columbia borough limits, 11 miles west of Lancaster.

The automobile struck the rear drive motor, severing the fuel line and the leading gasoline ignited. Columbia firemen played water on the gas tank to prevent an explosion.

The bus passengers were taken to Lancaster, transferred to another bus and continued their journey. The bus was enroute from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh.

The operator of the trailer-truck S. S. Lehigh of York, was uninjured.

PROBE BLAST CAUSE

Moscow, April 7. (AP)—Experts sifted the ruins of the blasted packing house of the DuPont Company's powder plant today in an effort to determine what touched off the explosion. Sixty 25-pound bags of blasting powder stored on the third story of the 24-foot wide building blew up Saturday night, demolishing the structure and rocking buildings within a 15-mile radius. All workers had left the premises and there were no injuries.

During the years 1939 and 1940, there were 41 propeller accidents reported, and all were serious or fatal.

government "by force or violence." At a public hearing on the measure, the issue was clearly centered around Communists.

Another measure touching on subversive activities could come to a final vote in the Senate by Tuesday. It would set up a "little Dies committee" of three senators, three representatives and three persons appointed by the governor, to investigate such activity, with a $50,000 appropriation. In the House a bill is in committee which would establish such a group, with three Senators and four representatives, and $100,000.

While a House committee studied two Democratic proposals for restricting the state to cut down the number of representatives in congress from 24 to 33, required by the latest census, the Republican Senate majority was about to submit its version.

With the House and Senate politically divided, re-apportionment is considered one of the most controversial subjects before the session.

Also coming up in the Senate today is the bill introduced by Senator John M. Walker (R-Allegheny) to eliminate the straight party ticket.

"Lack of mutual confidence as between the particular employers and particular labor group is usually at the back of failure to negotiate."

After calling attention to nine strike cases already turned over to the Defense Mediation Board, the secretary said that the Labor Department itself now was trying to settle the work stoppage in the soft coal industry and at the Ford Motor Company in Detroit, and also was seeking to avert a stoppage at the United States Steel Corporation.

exhorted Frenchmen to help tip the balance of war in the Mediterranean in Britain's favor. There had been indications that the marshal would broadcast an answer.)

"Honor requires us to undertake nothing against our former allies," Petain said. "But the integrity of the country requires that sources of our vital food and essential goods of our empire should be safeguarded. It is against these necessities that dissident propagandists act daily."

Despite announcements by Ferdinand de Brion, French ambassador in Paris and Paris newspapers that Petain would attack De Gaulle, he complained only against "subtle insidious propaganda inspired by Frenchmen."

He complained also that dissident "takes a more arrogant tone daily and the work of my government is attacked, defamed and slandered."

He praised General Maxime Weygand, French commander in North Africa, for faith to French unity, and Admiral Jean Duran, vice premier and foreign minister, as well as naval commander, "who has all my confidence."

Easter seals are being offered to the public here for the first time this year in the effort being made by the Warren County Crippled Children's Committee to raise additional funds for carrying forward its great humanitarian work.

Phases Of Crippled Children's Work Shown In Monthly Report

The work of the Warren County Crippled Children's Committee, one of the most beneficial being carried on by groups of public-spirited citizens, is one of the least understood by the public.

In the report of activities for the past month, submitted by the committee nurse, Orrie Westover Maasz, is indicated the various phases of the work and some part of its extent.

The nurse traveled 600 miles during the month to make calls, to take patients to orthopedic specialists, to examine children, to conduct posture classes and to teach home hygiene classes, all this in addition to 38 hours spent in her office.

She made one trip out of the county, taking two children, made seven calls in behalf of service and 174 in behalf of patients. Two new patients were accepted and one new cast was applied. She inspected 14 children at the Miles Run school for orthopedic defects and taught a home hygiene class at Kinzua once a week.

One of the most important phases of the work is the holding of regular posture classes in a number of county schools. Children attending these classes are listed as follows:

Irvine, 24; Pittsfield, 22; Russell, 34; Youngsville, 29; Barnes school, 7; Washington school in Sheffield, 22; Lincoln school in Sheffield, 31; Pleasant township, 20; Irvinedale, 16; North Warren, 37; Kinzua, 22. Vitamin capsules have been supplied to 86 of these pupils and cod liver oil was supplied for 14, an additional service being rendered by the nurse.

To assist in this work, which goes on twelve months of every year, the Warren County Crippled Children's Committee is asking the cooperation of all its friends in support of the Easter Seals for Crippled Children, a financing plan being tried for the first time by the local organization.

TO SEND GUNS

More than a dozen pistols and guns confiscated by Butler county authorities in recent years will be turned over to Great Britain for use by home defense forces, according to an Associated Press dispatch. Judge John H. Wilson gave District Attorney Willis A. MacDonald permission to transfer the weapons to Mrs. R. W. Stanford, of Beaver, chairman of the American Committee for Defense of British Homes.

There are now about 8,000,000 automobile radios in the United States, or about 27 per cent of the total number of radio-equipped homes.

CO. I MEMBERS SPEND WEEKEND WITH RELATIVES

Members of Company I, 112th Infantry, who arrived home late Saturday from Indiantown Gap for a week-end visit with relatives and friends, report that while a few of the Warren county men have been hospitalized because of colds, most of the company is in good health and working hard.

There were 21 officers and men in the group which enjoyed a 24-hour stay here. Eight of the men came in the company's station wagon, while the remainder made the trip in private cars.

Those home for the week-end included the following: Lt. Austin L. Swanson, Sgt. Ralph Fisher, Sgt. Irvine Kays, Sgt. George Lynch, Cpl. Elzie Lynch, Cpl. Lawrence Manross, Cpl. William Olson, Cpl. Joseph Greer, Cpl. Lester Arthur, Pvt. 1 Cl. Edward Fitzgerald, Forest Feiro and Leslie Brady, and Privates William Van Sile, Herman Howell, Richard Yaegle, Kenneth Keller, Glen Frantz, George Franklin, Paul Motz, Russell Gebhart and William Brown.

It was stated that several promotions are expected in the company within the next few days. Originally scheduled for March 1st, they were delayed a month while the men completed necessary work.

Officers of the company report that the men are making a good showing in the daily inspection of kitchens and barracks, their percentage ranging from 96 to 98. In the general inspections on Saturdays the company also is showing up very well, it was reported.

Considerable time is being spent on marksmanship with rifle, light machine gun and 60 mm. mortar, it is reported. Those working on rifle marksmanship are spending about 21 hours a week on this phase of training, while those working on light machine guns and mortars are spending about 32 of the 44 training hours at this work.

The company's new recreation building has been completed and is now ready for furniture, which is being provided by the Citizens' Farewell Committee here.

EMPLOYERS TO MAKE PAYMENTS BY APRIL 30TH

Employers liable for contributions under Pennsylvania's Unemployment Compensation Law were reminded today that returns for the first quarter of 1941 are due on or before Wednesday, April 30.

Secretary of Labor and Industry Lewis G. Hines pointed out that early payment of contributions will greatly facilitate the work of the state job insurance bureau, and also explained that delinquent contributors are subject to an additional interest charge of one per cent per month.

"Liable employers should file their returns for January, February and March as promptly as possible," Secretary Hines urged. "They will not only be helping the Unemployment Compensation Division, but will avoid incurring needless penalty charges."

Contributions at the rate of 2.7 per cent of payrolls, excluding wages in excess of $3,000 a year to an individual, are required under the Pennsylvania law from liable employers. These contributions are deposited in Pennsylvania's Unemployment Compensation Fund, to be used for the sole purpose of paying benefits to jobless workers who meet the law's requirements.

ASTHMA

ASTHMA is one of the allergic diseases, caused from a sensitivity of the bronchial membranes to pollens, animal effluvia or protein. The tendency is INHERENT and the disease is not contagious. While rarely fatal, Asthma is most distressing, inconvenient and exhausting, and the attacks place an undue strain on the heart and nervous system.

Asthmatic patients' major difficulty is EXHALING. The lining of the bronchial system has become irritated, and nature is trying to clear the air-passages of accumulated mucus. When the bronchial tubes and air-cells become congested, the one passage for air to the lower part of the lungs must be cleared, hence the spasmodic action of the tubes designated as ASTHMA. Sometimes an enlarged thymus gland, tumors that press on the windpipe, or a bad heart cause symptoms that are mistaken for Asthma. In children, especially, ASTHMATIC attacks are often mistaken for croup or bronchial pneumonia.

Specialists and authorities on Asthma and the allied allergic diseases (hay fever, eczema, hives, migrant, and mucous colitis) advise locating the CAUSE of sensitivity, and treatment for immunization, and less time and expense on palliative relief.

For First Lady's Easter Afternoon

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt went shopping on Fifth avenue, New York, for her Easter wear this morning. She was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. John A. Roosevelt, and her son, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr.

Members of Company I, 112th Infantry, who arrived home late Saturday from Indian town Gap for a week-end visit with relatives and friends, report that while a few of the Warren county men have been hospitalized because of colds, most of the company is in good health and working hard.

There were 21 officers and men in the group which enjoyed a 24-hour stay here. Eight of the men came in the company's station wagon, while the remainder made the trip in private cars.

Those home for the week-end included the following: Lt. Austin L. Swanson, Sgt. Ralph Fisher, Sgt. Irvine Kays, Sgt. George Lynch, Cpl. Elsie Lynch, Cpl. Lawrence Manross, Cpl. William Olson, Cpl. Joseph Greer, Cpl. Lester Arthur, Pvt. 1 Cl. Edward Fitzgerald, Forest Petro and Leslie Brady, and Privates William Van Sile, Herman Howell, Richard Yaegle, Kenneth Keller, Glen Prantz, George Franklin, Paul Motz, Russell Gebhart and William Brown.

It was stated that several promotions are expected in the company within the next few days. Originally scheduled for March 1st, they were delayed a month while the men completed necessary work.

Officers of the company report that the men are making a good showing in the daily inspection of kitchens and barracks, their percentage ranging from 96 to 98. The general inspections on Saturday the company also is showing up very well, it was reported.

Considerable time is being spent on marksmanship with rifle, light machine gun and 60 mm. mortar, it is reported. Those working on rifle marksmanship are spending about 21 hours a week on this phase of training, while those working on light machine guns and mortars are spending about 32 of the 44 training hours at this work.

The company's new recreation building has been completed and is now ready for furniture, which is being provided by the Citizens' Farewell Committee here.

LARGE SAVINGS TO EMPLOYERS UNDER NEW LAW

Savings to Pennsylvania employers of more than $6,000,000 during 1940, through operation of the amendments to the state's job insurance law which placed a ceiling of $3,000 on individual wages subject to a contribution, were indicated today in a report by Lewis G. Hines, Secretary of Labor and Industry.

The Pennsylvania Unemployment Compensation Law provides for contributions by liable employers at the rate of 2.7 per cent of payrolls, but a 1940 amendment excluded wages in excess of $3,000 per year to an individual from such contributions.

As a result, Pennsylvania employers saved approximately $243,600 on contributions for the first quarter, $1,506,000 for the third quarter, and $3,609,400 for the fourth quarter, or a grand total of $6,168,500 saved for the entire year.

Special Broadcasts Planned For Easter

Greetings to 1941's war Easter, with the usual sunrise service broadcasts, will include a roll call of fallen European nations, according to the Associated Press.

Also, Easter in Britain under the bombs will be described in pickups from England, Wales and Scotland, while British refugee children in the United States will talk with their parents back home.

The roll call, planned for NBC-blue, will comprise Belgium, Czechoslovakia, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Norway, Poland and France under the listing "We Shall Live Again." Among the participants are Princess Juliana of the Netherlands, Ignace Paderewski of Poland, Crown Prince Olaf of Norway and Eve Curie of France. Col. William J. Donovan will speak for the United States.

The CES chain will do the relay from the British Isles, planned to contain pickups from London, Edinburgh, Cardiff, Plymouth and Manchester.

ON SPECIAL DUTY

Kenneth E. Carlson, of Sheffield, inspector of war materials for the Cleveland ordnance district, left Cleveland Saturday for Rock Island, Ill., where he will spend ten weeks training and on special duty at the Rock Island Arsenal.

ENGINEER NAMED

The appointment of Leo P. Kinney, of Mercer, as an engineer at $2,400 a year has been announced by the State Highway Department in Harrisburg. Kinney will be located in District 1, which has headquarters at Franklin.

Friends of Howard E. Casey, 623 Prospect street, will be glad to learn that he is reported slightly improved. An employee of the Warren State Hospital, he is receiving treatment in the Stone building there.

WARREN COUNTY DIRECT RELIEF ROLLS DECLINE

For the first time in several weeks, general assistance rolls in Warren county showed a decrease during the week ending March 29, according to information from the Department of Public Assistance in Harrisburg.

There was a decrease of nine cases in this county, the result of 12 cases being closed, and only three opened. This brought the total number of cases down to 213, representing 577 persons.

Cost of relief in the county during the week was $1,063.53.

In the state there was a further reduction in relief rolls with a net decrease of 613 cases. This brought the total down to 134,769 cases representing 332,144 persons. Cost of relief in the state was $703,754.51 during the week.

Following are the figures for some nearby counties:

Clarion—Cases, 319; increase, 8; cost, $1,652.70.

EMPLOYERS TO MAKE PAYMENTS BY APRIL 30TH

Employers liable for contributions under Pennsylvania's Unemployment Compensation Law were reminded today that returns for the first quarter of 1941 are due on or before Wednesday, April 30.

Secretary of Labor and Industry Lewis G. Hines pointed out that early payment of contributions will greatly facilitate the work of the state job insurance bureau, and also explained that delinquent contributors are subject to an additional interest charge of one per cent per month.

"Liable employers should file their returns for January, February and March as promptly as possible," Secretary Hines urged.

"They will not only be helping the Unemployment Compensation Division, but will avoid incurring needless penalty charges."

Contributions at the rate of 2.7 per cent of payrolls, excluding wages in excess of $3,000 a year to an individual, are required under the Pennsylvania law from liable employers. These contributions are deposited in Pennsylvania's Unemployment Compensation Fund, to be used for the sole purpose of paying benefits to jobless workers who meet the law's requirements.

Russell

Russell, April 5—A very pleasant afternoon was spent Friday at the home of Mrs. Herman Moll, when more than 30 attended the antique tea. Mrs. Jennie Clark and Mrs. Hazel Thompson were old fashioned costumes. Many of the antiques shown were more than 100 years old. When these had been explained, Mrs. G. W. Faulkner and Mrs. C. A. Clark gave readings and the hostess served tea. She was assisted by Mrs. Harold Hale and Mrs. Alice Moll, the latter presiding over the tea table with Mrs. Jennie Clark.

Mrs. George Martin entertained five little children Friday afternoon at a birthday party for her daughter, Ruth, who was observing her sixth birthday anniversary. Refreshments were served to the following: Ina Carol Safford, Walter Edward Mellor, Orville Edquist and Glenn Pangborn.

Lady Pine Grove Rebekah Lodge No. 364 met at the lodge hall Thursday evening with two visitors: Mrs. Jennie Clark, who is district deputy president, and Mrs. G. W. Faulkner, of the Frewsburg lodge. After lodge, members and their husbands were invited to the dining room, where Mrs. Charles Fox and Miss V. Martin had planned a quiz program and egg hunt. Prizes went to Charles Fox, Rosa Enos and Ethel Matison. At the close of the evening, a tureen dinner was served to 16.

ASTHMA

ASTHMA is one of the allergic diseases, caused from a sensitivity of the bronchial membranes to pollens, animal effluvia or protein. The tendency is INHERENT and the disease is not contagious. While rarely fatal, Asthma is most distressing, inconvenient and exhausting, and the attacks place an undue strain on the heart and nervous system.

Asthmatic patients' major difficulty is EXHALING. The lining of the bronchial system has become irritated, and nature is trying to clear the air-passages of accumulated mucus. When the bronchial tubes and air-cells become congested, the one passage for air to the lower part of the lungs must be cleared, hence the spasmodic action of the tubes designated as ASTHMA. Sometimes an enlarged thymus gland, tumors that press on the windpipe, or a bad heart cause symptoms that are mistaken for Asthma. In children, especially, ASTHMATIC attacks are often mistaken for croup or bronchial pneumonia.

Specialists and authorities on Asthma and the allied allergic diseases may fever, eczema, hives, migrant, and colitis; advise locating the CAUSE of sensitivity, and treatment for immunization, and less time and expense on palliative relief.

INVESTIGATE BEFORE YOU INVEST

Persons of this community who are thinking of making a trip somewhere and economizing by making use of a "share the expense" proposition should beware, it is stated by the secretary of the Warren Chamber of Commerce.

"The U. S. Chamber of Commerce has just completed a thorough study of share-expense travel bureaus and have found that persons who travel in that manner may find themselves stranded in some inconvenient small town by a driver who departs in the night—sometimes with the passenger's possessions."

According to the local secretary, the report of the national Chamber points out that misleading representations are made by the so-called bureaus and the individuals who advertise for some one to "share the expense", and that these use unsafe equipment and unskilled, reckless drivers intent on getting rid of the passengers as quickly as possible.

Therefore, persons who contemplate traveling with others should protect themselves by insisting upon full information as to the promoter and upon being certain that he is insured in case of trouble or accident. The report says "The Bureaus apparently do little or no investigating as to the reliability of either driver or passengers. Because of the prevailing poor conditions of the vehicles and the necessity of the drivers continuing long hours with little rest during or between trips in order to make living expenses, the operations add materially to the hazards for all highway users."

The local secretary repeats a former warning—investigate before you invest!

GOOD AUGURY

May there not be an augury in the fact that Yugoslavia, which has achieved strong internal unity in the face of an external threat to that country, is a country of heterogeneous people, like the United States? Louis Adamic, author and active worker for the interests of the new American, has pointed out this fact, and cited it in support of the plain and simple idea that it is not blood and origins that unite a people, but a common interest, a common purpose, a common goal and ideal.

That also links the British, largely a homogeneous people of one blood, with the people of Yugoslavia, who are of many racial strains. What is forming against Nazi Germany, Italy and Japan, is a group of people linked by a powerful tie—"the people who won't be pushed around!"

CRIPPLED CHILDREN'S BILL OF RIGHTS

A better understanding of the purposes of the Crippled Children's Easter Seal sale being conducted by the local committee this week, may be had by reviewing the Crippled Children's Bill of Rights, which briefly, says:

"Not only for its own sake, but for the benefit of society as a whole, every crippled child has the right to the best body which modern science can help it to secure; the best mind which modern education can provide; the best training which modern vocational guidance can give; the best position in life which physical condition, perfected as best it may, will permit, and the best opportunity for spiritual development which its environment affords."

SERVICES ON SCHEDULE

Those of you who may be remaining away from the noonday Holy Week services at Trinity Memorial Episcopal church this week because of a feeling that they may run over time may rest assured that the preachers in charge are very strict about starting and stopping according to schedule. The services start at 12:10 and end at 12:50 o'clock, in an edifice that is so centrally located that little time is required in getting to it.

If you wake up in the morning and find that car you left parked on the pavement in front of the house has disappeared, don't report it stolen until you find out whether or not it was towed away.

After a "misty" start it certainly turned out to be a delightful Palm Sunday.

Another large group of Company I boys weekending here received a royal welcome from friends and relatives.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—The library of the New York Academy of Medicine suggests the intense stillness conveyed by Coleridge in his beautiful line, "As silent as a painted ship upon a painted ocean." It is here the thirsty for knowledge come silently to sit at broad, cork-topped reading tables and drink in the satisfying substance from an endless sea of text and reference books.

Doctors, students, nurses, writers come and go so quietly that no footfalls ever echo and no doors squeak. I tarried there, briefly, yesterday, and in those few moments nine men came in,
though not together, and each was recognized by the attendant and greeted as "Doctor." One was interested in cancer research. Another desired a treatise on the use of anesthesia in the Civil War. A third wanted a history of Mesmerism.
It was fascinating to study these men and see their requests. They wrote them on little slips of paper and dropped them into a basket. I was really sorry when my own books came.

THOUGH he is in his sixties,
W. Somerset Maugham continues to be one of the most prolific of writers. It was less than a year ago that his "last" group of short stories, published in book form, came out. This month a new novel, "Up at the Villa," is announced for publication. And this month too one of his novels, dramatized, will come to Broadway. He has written more than 20 plays and novels, and literally hundreds of short stories. Maugham is an interesting study of the purposeful man who wants to go somewhere and knows how to do it. He writes regularly, habitually, in routine, just as one dines and sleeps by routine. He writes longhand, with a scratching pen and a tireless, nerveless patience.

His characters are always from life. "If you don't write about the people you know, you don't know your characters very well," is the way he sums it up.

WILLIAM PERCY is not a southerner who just happens to be a gentleman. He is a gentleman who happens to have been born and reared in the Delta country of Mississippi, who went to Sewanee and Harvard and who studied law and wrote poetry and settled down, after the World War, to the duties of a southern planter and, finally, to write an engaging book called "Lanterns on the Levee."

This is called an autobiography
by his publishers as well as himself, but I look upon it rather as the scholarly and lucid expression of one man's views on a way of life that doesn't exist any more and on the change that has come over his part of the South and his own reaction to this change. He has some things to say about share-cropping and the land and the so-called "race problem" that some people will not agree with and others will not understand. But it is a thoughtful and beautiful statement—more of a confidence than a book, and I for one count myself fortunate to have read it.

WHEN plumbers opened a

ner drug store they found in the pipes a man's wrist watch and a butter knife. They identified the knife as one belonging to the drug store, but nobody, not even the soda-jerkers, had ever seen the watch.

STORIES IN STAMPS

Denmark Is Hard Hit
By German Occupation

DENMARK's commercial shipping, symbolized by the well-known ancient caravel stamp design above, is practically at a standstill, victim of Hitler's war.
Formerly one of the greatest sources of national income, the Danish fleet is now reduced to one-third its 1939 size.

Many Danish ships were caught in neutral ports when war broke out; one-third of the fleet was pressed into British service. The remainder, in Danish ports, lacks opportunity for profitable service.

German occupation is plunging Denmark deep into debt, forcing industry into decline and increasing unemployment. Factories unable to obtain raw materials, face shutdowns. Unemployed Danes are being moved into German industries.

The livestock industry, once source of Denmark's principal exports, has been hit by lack of feedstuffs. Cattle are living on acorns, fish by-products, chestnuts, heathers, kitchen scraps. Stocks of pigs must be cut 50 per cent, poultry 75 per cent. Reduction in cattle herds has already caused a decline in milk and butter production.

Denmark's cost of living, meanwhile, has risen steadily. Price increases have been among the highest in continental Europe.

CRANIUM CRACKERS

LATE LITERATURE
Book worms can come out from between the covers now, for here's a new set of questions on authors and the books they write. Who they're up on in the latest literature or not you shouldn't have much trouble with these.

1. What is the source of the titles "Grapes of Wrath" and "For Whom the Bell Tolls" and who are the authors of these books?
2. Three well-known authors, Gertrude Stein, James Hilton and Upton Sinclair, are among the authors of new books. Can you give the titles?
3. What well-known British author is now writing his latest novel while confined in a Nazi concentration camp?
4. Name the author of "Northwest Passage" and his latest best-selling work.
5. Two well-known authors recently died; one an Irishman, in Switzerland; the other an Ohioan, in Panama. Who are they?

A Washington Daybook

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — There is one thing about Washington — practically nothing can happen anywhere in the world but that you can find someone here who knows intimately
the facts and legends and people and countries involved.

I don't mean at the embassies either. Stiff formality, the demands of diplomacy, make them, for the most part, a pretty poor source of anything but official pronouncements. I mean people who have lived there or were born there and now live here, grinding their own axes and not those of some foreign land.

That is why, when the eyes of the world turned on Yugoslavia,
I went over to the bus terminal which (never used as such) now houses the makeshift offices of the Department of Justice's alien registration division and looked up Donald R. Perry, the acting director.

Perry is a product of the Wharren graduate school at the University of Pennsylvania. He is an economist and expert on finance.
For eight years before coming to Washington last summer he was state director of finance for Pennsylvania. You wouldn't think on the face of it that Donald Perry would know all about what someone described as the Balkan's crazy-quilt kingdom and land of unpronounceable names. But a little more than 20 years ago, Perry's name wasn't Perry. He wasn't an American and he was fresh from three years and seven months of bitter fighting in the gallant little army of his native Serbia.

An Epic In Blood

"THEIR history is not just history," he says. "It is an epic written in blood. For centuries they have striven to maintain freedom, independence and the democratic spirit. The Serbian peasants have an oft-repeated saying, 'I would rather go to my grave than become a slave,' and they mean it."

As the story of the Balkans is extended in 1941 terms, it might be clarified a little by remembering some of things that Perry has to say.

In the first place, you are going to read much of the Yugoslavian or Serbian peasants. Perhaps nowhere else in the world does the word peasant (selak) have the same meaning. There it is a title to be proud of. Eighty-three percent of the entire population are peasants and there is no nobility.
It is the one country in Europe
that boasts of a ruling peasant dynasty.

Point No. 2, Yugoslavia really is a patchwork kingdom, made up of Serbs, Croats, Slovenes, Mon-tenegrans, Bosnians and even others. Their main points of difference, Perry says, are concerned with who's going to be sheriff and who deputy sheriff—and the difference of religion. Part of the population is Greek Orthodox and part Roman Catholic. In the final analysis, Perry doesn't think that these differences within will split
the country.

On A Busy Highway

IN THE third instance, Yugoslavia is on the Balkan peninsula which is "the land bridge between Europe and Asia." It has been the main highway of the armies of Alexander the Great, Attila the Hun, Genghis Khan,
the Turks and the Crusaders.
Bismark said that no one could control Europe or the world without controlling this land-bridge.
Perry calls that "Bismark's Symphony in 5-B Major—Berlin, Budapest, Belgrade, Bosphorus and Baghdad." Whoever wins it will control the Black Sea and the Dardanelles—"the jugular vein of the economic life of Russia"—and be in a position to threaten the Suez, England's lifeline to the East.

"So you see," says Perry, "the turbulent history of Serbia has been one of storms from without, not within. All they want is to be left alone, but apparently they can't be, because they have built their homes on a too busy highway. Whatever happens, I feel certain they will never capitulate to the demands of any international bandits."

INVESTIGATE BEFORE YOU INVEST

Persons of this community who are thinking of making a trip somewhere and economizing by making use of a "share the expense" proposition should beware. It is stated by the secretary of the Warren Chamber of Commerce.

"The U. S. Chamber of Commerce has just completed a thorough study of share-expense travel bureaus and have found that persons who travel in that manner may find themselves stranded in some inconvenient small town by a driver who departs in the night—sometimes with the passenger's possessions."

According to the local secretary the report of the national Chamber points out that misleading representations are made by the so-called bureaus and the individuals who advertise for some one to "share the expense", and that these use unsafe equipment and unskilled, reckless drivers intent on getting rid of the passengers as quickly as possible.

Therefore, persons who contemplate traveling with others should protect themselves by insisting upon full information as to the promoter and upon being certain that he is insured in case of trouble or accident. The report says "The Bureaus apparently do little or no investigating as to the reliability of either driver or passengers. Because of the prevailing poor conditions of the vehicles and the necessity of the drivers continuing long hours with little rest during or between trips in order to make living expenses, the operations add materially to the hazards for all highway users."

The local secretary repeats a former warning—investigate before you invest!

GOOD AUGURY

May there not be an augury in the fact that Yugoslavia, which has achieved strong internal unity in the face of an external threat to that country, is a country of heterogeneous people, like the United States? Louis Adamie, author and active worker for the interests of the new American, has pointed out this fact, and cited it in support of the plain and simple idea that it is not blood and origins that unite a people, but a common interest, a common purpose, a common goal and ideal.

That also links the British, largely a homogeneous people of one blood, with the people of Yugoslavia, who are of many racial strains. What is forming against Nazi Germany, Italy and Japan, is a group of people linked by a powerful tie—"the people who won't be pushed around!"

CRIPPLED CHILDREN'S BILL OF RIGHTS

A better understanding of the purposes of the Crippled Children's Easter Seal sale being conducted by the local committee this week, may be had by reviewing the Crippled Children's Bill of Rights, which briefly, says:

"Not only for its own sake, but for the benefit of society as a whole, every crippled child has the right to the best body which modern science can help it to secure; the best mind which modern education can provide; the best training which modern vocational guidance can give; the best position in life which physical condition, perfected as best it may, will permit, and the best opportunity for spiritual development which its environment affords."

SERVICES ON SCHEDULE

Those of you who may be remaining away from the noonday Holy Week services at Trinity Memorial Episcopal church this week because of a feeling that they may run over time may rest assured that the preachers in charge are very strict about starting and stopping according to schedule. The services start at 12:10 and end at 12:50 o'clock, on an edifice that is so centrally located that little time is required in getting to it.

If you wake up in the morning and find that car you left parked on the pavement in front of the house has disappeared, don't report it stolen until you find out whether or not it was towed away.

After a "misty" start it turned out to be a delightful Palm Sunday.

Another large group of College boys weekending here received a royal welcome from friends and relatives.

Easter Egg Hunt in Europe

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—The library of the New York Academy of Medicine suggests the intense stillness conveyed by Coleridge in his beautiful line, "As silent as a painted ship upon a painted ocean." It is where the thirsty for knowledge come silently to sit at broad, cork-topped reading tables and drink in the satisfying substance from an endless sea of text and reference books.

Doctors, students, nurses, writers come and go so quietly that no football echo reverberates and no doors squeak. I tarried there, briefly, yesterday, and in those few moments nine men came in, though not together, and each was recognized by the attendant and greeted as "Doctor." One was interested in cancer research. Another desired a treatise on the use of anesthesia in the Civil War. A third wanted a history of Mesmerism. It was fascinating to study these men and see their requests. They wrote them on little slips of paper and dropped them into a basket. I was really sorry when my own books came.

THOUGH he is in his sixties, W. Somerset Maugham continues to be one of the most prolific of writers. It was less than a year ago that his "last" group of short stories, published in book form, came out. This month a new novel, "Up at the Villa," is announced for publication. And this month too one of his novels, dramatized, will come to Broadway. He has written more than 20 plays and novels, and literally hundreds of short stories. Maugham is an interesting study of the purposeful man who wants to go somewhere and knows how to do it. He writes regularly, habitually, in routine, just as one dines and sleeps by routine. He writes longhand, with a scratching pen and a tireless, nerveless patience.

This character is always from life. "If you don't write about the people you know, you don't know your characters very well," is the way he sums it up.

WILLIAM PERCY is not a southerner who just happens to be a gentleman. He is a gentleman who happens to have been born and reared in the Delta country of Mississippi, who went to Sewanee and Harvard and who studied law and wrote poetry and settled down, after the World War, to the duties of a southern planter and, finally, to write an engaging book called "Lanterns on the Levee."

This is called an autobiography by his publishers as well as himself, but look upon it rather as the scholarly and lucid expression of one man's views on a way of life that doesn't exist any more and on the change that has come over his part of the South and his own reaction to this change. He has some things to say about sharecropping and the land and the people who don't understand. But it is a thoughtful and beautiful statement—more of a confidence than a book, and I for one count myself fortunate to have read it.

WHEN plumbers opened a stopped-up drain at the corner drug store they found in the pipe a man's wrist watch and a butter knife. They identified the knife as one belonging to the drug store, but nobody, not even the soda-jerkers, had ever seen the watch.

Interesting Items Taken From the Warren Evening Times

In 1921

The plant, machinery and stock of the Allegheny Tank Car Company, located on Struthers street, was totally destroyed by a fire of unknown origin which started in the rear of the repair shop about 11:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The total loss was about $175,000.

Comealong Lodge of Odd Fellows, of Russell installed the following officers Monday: Noble Grande W. E. Weatherby; vice grand, Howard Ramsdell; warden, Jay Wiltse; conductor, Gerry Briggs; R. S. to N. G. G. A. Hale; L. S. to N. G. Harry Wells; R. S. to V. G. R. S. Thompson; L. S. to V. G. Albert Arnold; outside guardian, Charles Kellerman; inside guardian, Ralph Wade; R. S. Arthur Stanton; L. S. S. Howard Mason.

It is estimated more cars passed over Pennsylvania avenue west last evening, the occupants attracted by the fire at the Allegheny Tank Car Company, than has ever traveled the thoroughfare in as many hours at any time in the past.

Burgess B. G. Gregory, in response to appeals from the State Department of Health, is actively engaged in trying to arouse interest in clean-up week in this community.

The hum of the first lawn mower was heard yesterday.

In 1931

Warren Elks installed the following officers last night: Exalted Ruler, R. K. Russell; Esteemed leading knight, Ed C. Lowrey; esteemed loyal knight, Richard Topper; esteemed lecturing knight, Phil McEvoy; secretary, I. Greenlund; treasurer, R. M. Pughman; equisitor, DeVore Kibben; chaplain, B. H. Taylor; Tyler, Charles Kirschartz; organist, Mette Jordan; trustees, Bert Baker and Pete McCabe; delegate, George Savits.

What is thought by many to be one of the most wonderful opportunities in string musical study the children of Warren have had in a long time is being offered by the new Stan David School of Music.

Guy Bradley, of Buffalo, blind speaker, who may well be called "An Ambassador of Optimism," was the speaker at the dinner-meeting of the Kiwanis Club today.

Coroner Ed C. Lowrey will be the speaker at tomorrow's meeting of the Zonta Club, and will speak on "Facts About the Coroner's Office."

Warren friends of the Upsala College Glee Club are pleased over the fact that it will appear here Wednesday evening at St. Paul's church.

STORIES IN STAMPS

Denmark Is Hard Hit By German Occupation

DENMARK'S commercial shipping, symbolized by the well-known ancient caravel stamp design above, is practically at a standstill, victim of Hitler's war. Formerly one of the greatest sources of national income, the Danish fleet is now reduced to one-third its 1939 size.

Many Danish ships were caught in neutral ports when war broke out; one-third of the fleet was pressed into British service. The remainder, in Danish ports, lacks opportunity for profitable service.

German occupation is plunging Denmark deep into debt, forcing industry into decline and increasing unemployment. Factories, unable to obtain raw materials, face shutdowns. Unemployed Danes are being moved into German industries.

The livestock industry, once source of Denmark's principal exports, has been hit by lack of feed-stuffs. Cattle are living on acorns, fish by-products, chestnuts, health- or kitchen scraps. Stocks of pigs must be cut 50 per cent, poultry 75 per cent. Reduction in cattle herds has already caused a decline in milk and butter production.

Denmark's cost of living, meanwhile, has risen steadily. Price increases have been among the highest in continental Europe.

I mean people who have lived there or were born there and now live here, grinding their own axes and not those of some foreign land.

That is why, when the eyes of the world turned on Yugoslavia, I went over to the bus terminal which (never used as such) now houses the makeshift offices of the Department of Justice's alien registration division and looked up Donald R. Perry, the acting director.

Perry is a product of the Wharton graduate school at the University of Pennsylvania. He is an economist and expert on finance. For eight years before coming to Washington last summer he was state director of finance for Pennsylvania. You would think on the face of it that Donald Perry would know all about what someone described as the Balkan's crazy-quilt kingdom and land of unpronounceable names. But a little more than 20 years ago, Perry's name wasn't Perry. He wasn't an American and he was fresh from three years and seven months of bitter fighting in the gallant little army of his native Serbia.

An Epic In Blood

"THEIR history is not just history," he says. "It is an epic written in blood. For centuries they have striven to maintain freedom, independence and the democratic spirit. The Serbian peasants have an off-repeated saying, 'I would rather go to my grave than become a slave, and they mean it.'"

As the story of the Balkans is extended in 1941 terms, it might be clarified a little by remembering some of things that Perry has to say.

In the first place, you are going to read much of the Yugoslavian or Serbian peasants. Perhaps nowhere else in the world does the word peasant (seljak) have the same meaning. There it is a title to be proud of. Eighty-three per cent of the entire population are peasants and there is no nobility. It is the one country in Europe that boasts of a ruling peasant dynasty.

Point No. 2, Yugoslavia really is a patchwork kingdom, made up of Serbs, Croats, Slovenes, Montenegrins, Bosnians and even others. Their main points of difference, Perry says, are concerned with who's going to be sheriff and who deputy sheriff—and the difference of religion. Part of the population is Greek Orthodox and part Roman Catholic. In the final analysis, Perry doesn't think that these differences within will split the country.

On A Busy Highway

IN THE third instance, Yugoslavia is on the Balkan peninsula which is "the land bridge between Europe and Asia." It has been the main highway of the armies of Alexander the Great, Attila the Hun, Genghis Khan, the Turks and the Crusaders. Bismarck said that no one could control Europe or the world without controlling this land-bridge. Perry calls that "Bismarck's Symphonic in 5-B Major—Berlin, Budapest, Belgrade, Bosphorus and Baghdad." Whoever owns it will control the Black Sea and the Dardanelles—the jugular vein of the economic life of Russia—and be in a position to threaten the Suez, England's lifeline to the East.

"So you see," says Perry, "the turbulent history of Serbia has been one of storms from without, not within. All they want is to be left alone, but apparently they can't be, because they have built their homes on a too busy highway. Whatever happens, I feel certain they will never capitulate to the demands of any international bandits."

FUNNY BUSINESS

"But I was told never to salute an officer with a pipe in my mouth!"

HEART'S HAVEN

Ruth Rosemary Corby

YESTERDAY: For a week the group of guests Mrs. Marbury brought down to the island of North Carolina, has been marooned. Strange and dangerous things have happened, in addition, and are still happening. The latest is the confession of Mr. Howe, Mr. Marbury's lawyer, that his employer had really sent him down to be sure Mrs. Marbury did not buy the island. So Howe is responsible for the long delay. He is explaining himself now.

Chapter 23

Almost An Explanation

MRS. MARBURY gasped, and Mr. Howe made her an old-fashioned jerky bow and hurried on before she could interrupt. "Mr. Marbury, I must tell you his wife's eagerness to find an island home for herself and Gina was unwise. He felt that until Gina was married it would be better if she and her aunt did not live in such a remote spot. "You understand now why Mr. Droissard came along. He was engaged by Mr. Marbury to create a few unpleasant incidents—nothing serious, of course, but enough to change Mrs. Marbury's mind, should she have happened to take a fancy to the place. Mr. Droissard thought he needed more time than just one night, so he asked the plane not to return. I may as well tell you that there were three incidents which were created by Jim Droissard. "First, it was he who shot at Mr. Millard, when he and Miss Prentice were out walking on the sand. Of course he made sure that he would miss them. "Second, Jim did not hurt his arm on the back porch stairs. He purposely saved through the plank and then declared he was hurt. "Third, Jim was really trying to reassure Miss Prentice that night when she thought a ghost touched her, but he lost his head when she screamed and ran back into the hall where we all saw him. "All this was done only for the purpose, I assure you, of providing a little mystery. And of making Mrs. Marbury feel that the house was undesirable. "Well, Mrs. Marbury has already told us that she no longer wants the house," continued the lawyer. "But, so long as I knew the origin and harmlessness of these little incidents, I was prepared to carry out my part of the program. Now there are an increasing number of—shall we say, accidents?—if which some outside and probably unfriendly person is responsible. "For example, I naturally thought that there would be a rowboat or a launch of some sort which would go to the mainland and arrange to get us off within a few hours. The opportunity was there, and we were marooned, but I have been puzzled, and disturbed, by our continued lack of contact with the mainland. "Also, when we did sight a ship, although it must have seen our signal, it turned and sailed away. The incidents of last night, Mr. Jackson receiving such a large, unexplained sum of money, and the disappearance of his wife, leave little doubt in my mind but that we have stumbled onto a hideout for some sort of gang operating outside the law. I shall not be at ease until we are all safely back home. And I do apologize, and regret more than I can say, having unwittingly aided these unknown malefactors. "There was a barrage of questions, which mostly went unanswered, when the lawyer had finished. For the first time Eve began to be really frightened. "Somehow, through all Mrs. Jackson's talk of ghosts and the incidents which the lawyer had mentioned, she had not been as uncomfortable as she had the first day, just before they landed. Living in the house, even under such bizarre circumstances, had so accustomed her to the place that it no longer frightened her. "Now she saw that her first premonition had probably been correct; there was a possibility that they might be in real danger. "Some of the others began to feel as she did. Eve thought, as the day wore on and there was no sign of the plane, or boat, or Mrs. Jackson. If the "gang" was determined to hold them on the island still longer, for inexplicable reasons of their own, there was certainly nothing they could do. This feeling of helplessness gradually took possession of them all and, losing their gaiety of the morning, they became peevish, cross or irritable by turns. "Eve had still another worry. The conviction had been growing upon her ever since last night that she could not continue this engagement to Neil unless she told him the exact circumstances under which she and Julie had come to the island. "Her feeling of loyalty toward Julie had prevented Eve from telling Neil all about it when he first proposed. But she began to see more and more clearly that she owed a certain loyalty to herself. At the moment she felt ashamed and out of patience with herself every time she looked in the mirror. "That night, after a sketchy dinner consisting of sardines, crackers and a batch of Julie's well-meant but unsuccessful biscuits, Eve resolved she would stand it no longer. When Neil suggested that they again walk down to the shore for awhile, she agreed at once. But her face was grave as she fell in step with him. This would not be easy.

Hard Job

"INCREDIBLE sort of night, isn't it?" Neil waved an arm at the mist billowing in front of the ocean, scudding in great puffs ahead of a light breeze. "It makes everything seem even more unreal than usual," said Eve. "The house up there on the terraces looks like something done with lights, for a stage scene."

Neil had been investigating a log which was lying well back of the water line, half imbedded in the sand. "It's dry," he announced. "Let's sit here."

But Eve held back. "No," she said. "Not yet. I feel like walking. She did not know why, but she felt she could only say what she had to say, if they were walking along together, not sitting side by side, her words falling weighted in the stillness. "Walking's what you can get plenty of on this island," grinned Neil. "If you'd said you wanted to dance to a name orchestra now, it would be serious. We're fresh out of name orchestras. Speaking of music, though, you'd think the Jacksons would have had a radio, away off out here, wouldn't you?"

"They're a strange pair," said Eve. "Listen, Neil, I wanted to walk because I wanted to talk."

"Honey, you're a poet," Neil said, his cheek caressingly against her hair for a moment. "You're not Mrs. Somebody," demanded Neil, after a brief silence.

"No, oh no," Eve said hastily. "Eve Prentice is my right name, too. That's not it. But I haven't any money. I never had any—I mean, I'm a working girl. I don't belong here." She said it all in one breath, stopped suddenly, feeling that she was not making a very good job of her explanation.

No Surprise

"MONEY?" Neil was genuinely surprised. "I never thought you had money. I mean, I never thought of it at all, in connection with you."

"Well," said Eve. She began to feel a little desperate. How could she make Neil understand how very different her life had been before she won that prize, before she met Mrs. Marbury? She must make him understand. It was the only fair thing to do. "Maybe if I begin at the beginning it will be clearer," she spoke slowly, choosing her words carefully. "Just a few weeks ago I was working in an interior decorating shop in New York. I had a job, and I was glad of it. The job, you see, paid me enough to live on—not the kind of living you know, but the kind that provides three meals a day, a small room in a boarding house, and some clothes."

Eve glanced up to see if Neil was listening. He drew her arm through his. "Go on, darling," he murmured. "You have a beautiful voice. I love the husky way it sort of breaks, every little while."

"Oh, Neil, I'm talking seriously!" "And I'm listening, sugar. I heard every word. You had got to the boarding house. Was it a fairish place, darling? With nice people and everything?"

"It wasn't nice at all, in the sense you mean," said Eve, almost sharply. "My room was small and plain and apt to be cold in winter. The only nice thing about the boarding house was that Julie lived there, too."

"Your aunt," supplied Neil. "She's not really my aunt. That's part of the deception. But we got to know each other very well and we sort of stood together against the rest. Julie had no job, but she had a tiny bit of an income, and that kept her going. "Several months ago we heard about a contest—it was in all the newspapers. Julie and I formed a partnership and went into it, and we won: We won three thousand dollars," said Eve, her voice taking on a note of pride, in spite of herself. "It was after we won that Julie had an idea. I didn't like it much from the first, but she seemed so set on it— "It was her idea that we take the money and go to a smart resort. The plan was for us to meet some nice people," Eve paused for a moment, feeling the hot color in her cheeks. She was glad they were outdoors, walking arm in arm, so that Neil could not look into her face. "Julie hoped I would meet an eligible man with money who would marry me," she finished. Now that it was over, she felt tired. "Let's go back to the house," she whispered, after a minute. "Neil swung her round and they started back along the shore. "We can go to the house in a few minutes, but first I want to explain something to you, too. We'll go sit on that log, shall we?"

Chapter 24

Second Confession

"THE first thing I have to tell you won't take long," said Neil when they were seated. He sprawled on the sand, his back against the log, where he could look up at Eve, above him. "My mother wanted me to marry on the sly, just what Julie wanted for you. She said I would have to, because I have no money—there isn't any more money in the Bowron family. "That's the first thing I wanted to tell you. The second thing will take longer to tell you—maybe all my life long. But it's simple, too, in a way. It's just this: since I've found you, nothing else seems important, one way or the other. "I'm sort of sorry that I haven't anything to offer you. I haven't even got a job! He broke off to laugh ruefully at himself. "But there is enough to carry us along until I can get something. I'm going to get in touch with friends of the family as soon as we get off this blasted island. No I won't call this place names—it was here I got to know you."

He reached for Eve's hand, pressed it against his lean, hard cheek. Nervously, Eve spoke after a moment. "Tell me about your mother—she's a countess, isn't she? Is she pretty?"

"Mums? She's adorable. Titian-haired and brown-eyed, with the prettiest little nose in the world. When I want to tease her, I kiss her on the nose. She's really quite tall, but she manages to look tiny—she has a way of holding her head on one side when you're talking to her, and she makes little fluttering gestures with her hands, and somehow you get the impression that she is helpless and fragile. "She's neither. She has an iron will and she twirls the count around her little finger—like that!" Neil made wild gyrations with one hand. "She tried her tricks on me, too, but I'm out of her sphere of influence now. She'll be disappointed if I don't marry a fortune, but she'll get over it."

"You know, Neil, there's something to be said for your mother's point of view," said Eve, soberly. "You've been brought up—she hesitated, seeking the right phrase. "In the lap of luxury," Neil suggested, in a bantering tone. "That's literally true, I suppose. I was brought up to believe that I would one day have a slice of the Bowron millions. But when I came of age, there weren't any. My mother has a small fortune of her own—just about enough to enable her to get by. I've been coasting along on the momentum the family name has given me. "And I don't want to sail under false colors, either. Eve. Mother always dinned it into my ears that I would marry well and I took it for granted that I would, too. I accepted the idea without tying it up with any specific girl. Probably I should have revolted against the very idea of marrying with a bank account definitely in view. But I didn't. Don't be harsh with me, though. I don't believe I ever thought the thing through. You know the way you can go on for years, thinking that something is right and just the way it should be, and then, all of a sudden, you know that you can't endure it another minute? "That's the way it's been with me and my outlook, you might say, on marriage. I never noticed anything wrong with mother's reasoning until I met you. But now I know that marrying for money is a cock-eyed idea, and something I couldn't bring myself to do in a thousand years. I'm mad about you, Eve."

The Truth

HE LEANED his head against her knees. It was a disarming gesture. Eve, looking down at him, felt suddenly that she must not hurt him. She put out a hand and touched his fair hair, pale in the luminous dark. It was very fine, silken hair, like a child's. It increased in her the sense of having to be careful that she did not hurt him. "She felt an odd confusion rising in her, engulfing her. Why did she feel that she must not hurt Neil? Why did she feel that she was very close to hurting him? "Just think, Eve, we can go on like this all the rest of the years—forever," murmured Neil. Then, in a flash of insight so blinding that she felt herself begin to tremble, Eve knew what it was, deep in her consciousness, that had been struggling to the surface of her mind. This that she felt for Neil was not love. "She liked him; she was aware of his vitality, of his pulsing nearness, but she did not love him. She did not want to cling to him, she did not even want to stay out there with him in the enchanted night, with the mist shutting them away from all the rest of the world. "She wanted to run madly up the twisting path with the rhododendrons flinging out their leafy arms to stop her, to be safe indoors, away from Neil and his need for her kindness, her response. "Neil felt her tremble. "You're cold?" "No-o"—Eve caught herself—"that is, I am a little. There's a dampness."

"How thoughtless I've been!" Neil rose instantly, drew her to her feet. "He took off his coat, drew it close about her shoulders. He would have kissed her, but she turned her face away. Something in the gesture arrested Neil. "Eve," he said. There was a questioning note in his voice. "Suddenly Eve knew that she must tell him—now, before he had built up an entirely untrue image of her in his thoughts. She turned to face him. "I'm sorry, Neil. It's all a mistake."

"What is it?" "—You, it isn't—it wouldn't—oh, Neil, help me! Can't you see what I'm trying to say? I—I adore you, but I don't really love you!" "Love," she went on, gaining courage from the sound of her own voice, "is something different. I'm sure, when I said I'd marry you, I thought I loved you. But tonight—it came over me so quickly—I discovered that what I feel for you isn't love."

Neil who had been staring at her in consternation, broke the silence that followed her words with a short laugh. "All the same, I love you, Eve," he said, doggedly. "What's more, I believe you love me. But here—this eerie place—you're upset, you don't know your own feelings. When we get off this desert island, back where things are sane and sensible, you'll feel differently. You'll find out that you do love me, darling!"

He put his arm around her, drew her close to him, but did not attempt to kiss her. "Come on back to the house," he said. "We won't talk about this any more tonight."

Compromise

EVE walked beside him, docile and silent for a few minutes. Then she burst out: "No! It isn't just the place. I'm sure, Neil."

"Eve, Eve, I can't give you up like this! Suddenly Neil's voice was hoarse. "Say you'll marry me six months from now—a year, I'll wait, I'll wait gladly, darling. But don't take all hope away—promise me that some day you'll marry me!" He caught her by the shoulders, turned her so that she faced him. "Eve felt that she was going to cry. "Don't, Neil," she said gently. "You like me, you enjoy being with me."

"Oh, I do, Neil! More than I can tell you."

"But you don't want to marry me?" "No."

"There's another man!" "That's not true," Eve began, and stopped short. There was—Brett! As surely as if he had stepped into the path before them, Eve knew that it was Brett who had come between her and Neil. Brett, who at best treated her like someone who must be tolerated! Brett, in whose eyes she had more than once surprised something very like contempt! She loved Brett, she thought wildly. Neil's words came to her as if from a great distance. "Whoever he is, Neil was saying, "Give me a chance, Eve. Give yourself time to think things over. Eve!" he cried, "it isn't the money—"

"How can you?" Eve was sobbing now. Instantly Neil was apologetic. "Forgive me. I didn't mean that. I don't know what I'm saying. I only know I can't go on without you, Eve. Tell me that you will wait a while, make up your mind later on. I'll release you from the engagement, if you want it that way. But don't tell anybody tonight. Let things go on as they are— "I'm so cold," said Eve miserably. "I don't know what to say, Neil. All right, I won't say anything about our engagement. We'll just go on—"

"Darling Eve," murmured Neil. He seized one of her cold hands and they walked the rest of the way hand in hand. Eve slipped up the stairs, and powdered away the traces of tears before returning to the living room. "To be continued"

Around New York

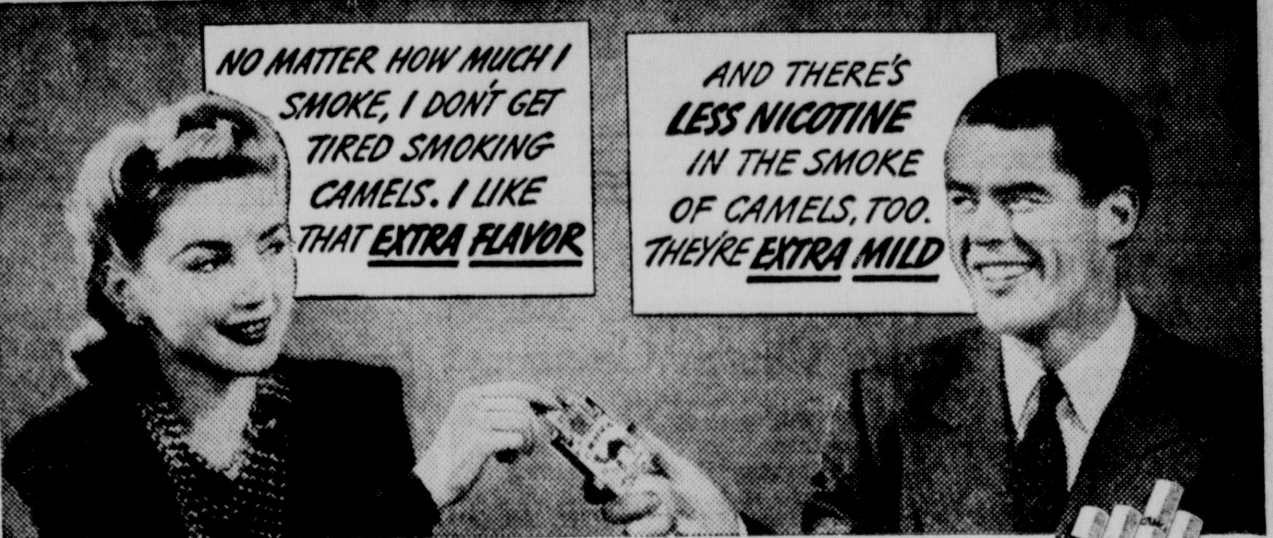

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—I read in the late edition of a New York newspaper last evening that young Mr. Orson Welles certainly had a "flair" for the unusual in his theatrical adventures. Perhaps Mr. Welles does go sniffing around, nosing out this and that by the infallibility of his sense of smell, but without wishing to appear too pedantic I would like to suggest that Mr. Welles has a gift for creating disturbances rather than a "flair" for the unusual. The word flair means a sense of smell. It just happens that Orson Welles is a restless and imaginative egoist with a talent for splitting camps into divergent groups, inspiring arguments that wreck tried friendships of 20 years standing, and a manner as engaging and sometimes as impetuous as a slap in the face. Very few people take Mr. Welles casually. You either admire him or detest him. When his Martian broadcast hoodwinked a lot of people several years ago, he made a passel of enemies. He made enemies in Hollywood and on Broadway and on the air, for he is all things to all forms of artistic expression, including acting, orating, writing, directing, criticizing, and soothing. He is a headline hog. It isn't his fault. He is wholly consistent. His ways just happen to be different from other people's. He is altogether an extrovert, and he cares nothing for trodding on anybody's feet, be they great or small.

As usual, there is a wide and sometimes violent difference of opinion as to the merits of this play. Most of the critics gave it strong approval. One makes the unqualified statement that Welles is a "genius." Another thinks the play, as such, loses the clumsy power that was the novel's chief charm. But I for one am not in favor of raceplays that must necessarily appeal to emotionalism and sensationalism. I cannot see that any good can come of them and I can see where a great deal of harm might be the result. "Native Son," as such, unfolds in ten scenes without intermission and is played in soft lights. All this is Mr. Welles doing, and very effective it is. But with all its dramatic qualities, its measured tempo and its obvious sincerity, it is a raw and brutal business that wounds and leaves scars and yet in no sense contributes to the solution of a tragic and heartbreaking problem. . . .

AFTER the play's successful premiere, Mr. Welles hung around for a day or two, accepting the congratulations of his friends, then flew back to Hollywood. One report says he is to go to Mexico City. Another says he will remain in Hollywood. A third says he will return to New York and give his undivided time to the drama. Probably all three will happen; or if any man can go to Mexico and Hollywood on picture and radio chores while remaining exclusively in Manhattan wedded to the drama, Orson Welles is that man. There just isn't anybody else anywhere like him.

Letters to the Editor

R. D. No. 1, Tidoute, Penna. April 4, 1941 Editor Warren Times-Mirror, Warren, Pennsylvania.

Dear Sir Yesterday under plain cover with no return address I received through the mail a booklet called "God and the State." This was supposed to be a religious booklet, but so far as I can see it is merely propaganda sent out to influence the people against our flag and our country. They complain about the custom of saluting the flag and according to their own definition of the word "salute" means to greet with a kiss, to bow and courtesy, the uncovering of the head, a clasp of the hand or the like. If they think the salute to the flag is wrong they must also believe it wrong to salute a dear friend or relative by a hand shake or any demonstration of affection. I do not believe that by holding our flag and our country in reverence we are placing them before God. We are commanded to honor our fathers and our mothers that our days may be long in the land which the Lord our God giveth us, and it is my honest belief that we should love and, if necessary, protect that land.

They condemn school boards who require the salute of the flag but, I as a school director and secretary of the board feel that there is not enough patriotism and loyalty to our flag and our country being taught to our children, both in school and out. My husband and three brothers served their country in the first world war and I have not heard any regrets except that Germany should have been wiped off the map and so saved the second world war and much suffering. As a mother I believe that my children as well as all children in our great land should be taught love and respect for the flag as well as for their parents, not to put them before God, but certainly next to Him.

We read of sabotage and communism in the larger cities and do not think so much of it, but when we find it lurking right here in our midst we begin to wonder where it will all end. So far as I am concerned this booklet, "God and the State," is no more or no less than Communism and should be treated as such. If it was in good faith and the right thing, why was there no return address? This one sent to me will make the fire in my heating stove a little hotter for a few seconds and I hope that will be the fate of many if not all of them. Sincerely for our Flag and our Country, Mrs. Carol Westfall.

YESTERDAY: For a week the group of guests Mrs. Marbury brought down to Heart's Haven, an island off the coast of North Carolina, has been marooned. Strange and dangerous things have happened, in addition, and are still happening. The latest is the confession of Mr. Howe, Mr. Marbury's lawyer, that his employer had really sent him down to be sure Mrs. Marbury did not buy the island. So Howe is responsible for the long delay. He is explaining himself now.

Chapter 23 Almost An Explanation MRS. MARBURY gasped, and Mr. Howe made her an old-fashioned bow and hurried on before she could interrupt: "Mr. Marbury felt that his wife's eagerness to find an island home for herself and Gina was unwise. He felt that until Gina was married it would be better if she and her aunt did not live in such a remote spot.

"You understand now why Mr. Droissard came along. He was engaged by Mr. Marbury to create a few unpleasant incidents—nothing serious, of course, but enough to change Mr. Marbury's mind, should she have happened to take a fancy to the place. Mr. Droissard thought he needed more time than just one night, so he asked the plane not to return. I may as well tell you that there were three incidents which were created by Jim Droissard. "First, it was he who shot at Mr. Alliard, when he and Miss Prentice were out walking on the sand. Of course he made sure that he would miss them.

"Second, Jim did not hurt his arm on the back porch stairs. He purposely sawed through the plank and then declared he was hurt.

"Third, Jim was really trying to reassure Miss Prentice that night when she thought a ghost touched her, but he lost his head when she screamed and ran back into the hall where we all saw him.

"All this was done only for the purpose of assuring you of providing a little mystery. And of making Mrs. Marbury feel that the house was undesirable.

"Well, Mrs. Marbury has already told us that she no longer wants the house," continued the lawyer. "But, so long as I know the origin and harmlessness of these little incidents, I was prepared to carry out the plan of the program. Now there are an increasing number of—shall we say, accidents?—for which some outside and probably unfriendly person is responsible.

"For example, I naturally thought that there would be a row-boat or a launch of some sort and arrange to get us off within a few hours if necessary. I made use of the opportunity we had, since we were marooned, but I have been puzzled, and disturbed by our continued lack of contact with the mainland.

"Also, when we did sight a ship, although it must have seen our signal, it turned and sailed away. The incidents of last night, Mr. Jackson receiving such a large, unexplained sum of money, and the disappearance of his wife leave little doubt in my mind but that we have stumbled onto a hideout for some sort of gang operating outside the law. I shall not be at ease until we are all safely back home. And I do apologize, and regret more than I can say, having unwittingly aided these unknown malefactors."

"There was a barrage of questions, which mostly went unanswered, when the lawyer had finished. For the first time, Eve began to be really frightened.

Somehow, through all Mrs. Jackson's talk of ghosts and the incidents which the lawyer had mentioned, she had not been as uncomfortable as she had the first day, just before they landed. Living in the house, even under such bizarre circumstances, had so accustomed her to the place that it no longer frightened her.

Now she saw that her first premonition had probably been correct; there was a possibility that they might be in real danger. Some of the others began to feel as she did. Eve thought, as the day wore on and there was no sign of the plane, or Mrs. Jackson. If the "gang" was determined to hold them on the island still longer, for inexplicable reasons of their own, there was certainly nothing they could do. This feeling of helplessness gradually took possession of them all, and, losing their gaiety of the morning, they became peevish, cross and irritable by turns.

Eve had still another worry. The conviction had been growing upon her ever since last night that she could not continue this engagement to Neil unless she told him the exact circumstances under which she and Julie had come to the island.

Her feeling of loyalty toward Julie had prevented Eve from telling Neil all about it when he first proposed. But she began to see more and more clearly that she owed a certain loyalty to herself. At the moment she felt ashamed and out of patience with herself every time she looked in the mirror.

"That night, after a sketchy dinner consisting of sardines, crackers and a batch of Julie's well-meant but unsuccessful biscuits, Eve resolved she would stand it no longer. When Neil suggested that they again walk down to the shore for awhile, she agreed at once. But her face was grave as she fell in step with him. This would not be easy.

Hard Job "INCREDIBLE sort of night, isn't it?" Neil waved an arm at the mist billowing in front of the ocean, scudding in great puffs ahead of a light breeze.

"It makes everything seem even more unreal than usual," said Eve. "The house up there on the terraces looks like something done with lights, for a stage scene."

Neil had been investigating a log which was lying half back of the water line, half imbedded in the sand. "It's dry," he announced. "Let's sit here."

But Eve held back. "No," she said, "not yet. I feel like walking." She did not know why, but she felt she could only say what she had to say, if they were walking along together, not sitting side by side, her words falling veiled in the stillness.

YESTERDAY: Eve has been marooned with the rest of Mrs. Marbury's houseparty on Heart's Haven, an island off the North Carolina coast. She has also got herself engaged to Neil Bowron, of a very distinguished family, which was what her "aunt" Julie had persuaded her to do. But now she has confessed to Neil that she isn't one of his set, and expects him to be horrified. The odd thing is that he is not horrified.

Chapter 24 Second Confession

"THE first thing I have to tell you won't take long," said Neil when they were seated. He sprawled on the sand, his back against the log, where he could look up at Eve, above him.

"My mother wanted me to marry someone rich, just what Julie wanted for you. She said I would have to, because I have no money. There isn't any more money in the Bowron family."

"That's the first thing I wanted to tell you. The second thing will take longer to tell you—maybe all my life long. But it's simple, too, in a way. It's just this: since I've found you, nothing else seems important, one way or the other.

"I'm sort of sorry that I haven't anything to offer you—I haven't even got a job. He broke off, to laugh at himself. "But there is enough to carry us along until I can get something. I'm going to get in touch with friends of the family as soon as we get off this blasted island. No I won't call this place names—it was here I got to know you."

He reached for Eve's hand, pressed it against his lean, hard cheek. Nervously, Eve spoke after a moment.

"Tell me about your mother—she's a countess, isn't she? Is she pretty?"

"Auntie! She's adorable. Titan-headed and brown-eyed with the prettiest little nose in the world. When I want to tease her, I kiss her on the nose. She's really quite tall, but she manages to look tiny—she has a way of holding her head on one side when you're talking to her, and she makes little fluttering gestures with her hands, and somehow you get the impression that she is helpless and fragile."

"She's neither. She has an iron will, and she twirls the count around her little finger—like that!" Neil made wild gyrations with one hand. "She tried her tricks on me, but I haven't let her. I've influenced her. She'll be disappointed if I don't marry a fortune, but she'll get over it."

"You know, Neil, there's something to be said for your mother's point of view," said Eve, soberly. "You've been brought up—she hesitated, seeking the right phrase—the lap of luxury." Neil suggested, in a bantering tone, "That's literally true, I suppose. I was brought up to believe that I would one day have a slice of the Bowron millions. But when I came of age, there weren't any. My mother has a small fortune of her own—just about enough to enable her to get by. I've been coasting along on the momentum the family name has given me."

"And I don't want to sail under false colors, either. Eve. Mother always dinned it into my ears that I would marry well and I took it for granted that I would, too. I accepted the idea without trying it up with any specific girl. I couldn't I should have revolted against the very idea of marrying with a bank account definitely in view. But I didn't. Don't be harsh with me, though. I don't believe I ever thought the thing through. You know the way you can go on for years, thinking that something is right and just the way it should be, and then, all of a sudden, you know that you can't endure it another minute?"

"That's the way it's been with me and my outlook, you might say, on marriage. I never noticed anything wrong with mother's reasoning until I met you. But now I know that marrying for money is a cock-eyed idea, and something I couldn't bring myself to do in a thousand years. I'm mad about you, Eve."

The Truth HE LEANED his head against his knees. It was a disarming gesture, Eve, looking down at him, felt suddenly that she had not hurt him. She put out a hand and touched his fair hair, pale in the luminous dark. It was very fine, silken hair, like a child's. It increased in her the sense of having to be careful that she did not hurt him.

She felt an odd confusion rising in her, engulfing her. Why did she feel that she must not hurt Neil? Why did she feel that she was very close to hurting him?

"Just think, Eve, we can go on like this all the rest of the years—together," murmured Neil. Then, in a flash of insight so blinding that she felt herself believed to tremble. Eve knew what it was, deep in her consciousness, that had been struggling to the surface of her mind. This that she felt for Neil was not love.

She liked him: she was aware of his vitality, of his pulsing nearness, but she did not love him. She did not want to cling to him, she did not even want to stay out there with him in the enchanted night, with the mist shutting them away from all the rest of the world.

She wanted to run madly up the twisting path with the rhododendrons flinging out their leafy arms to stop her, to be safe indoors, away from Neil and his need for her kindness, her response.

Neil felt her tremble. "You're cold?" "No," Eve caught herself—that is, I am a little. There's a dampness—" "How thoughtless I've been!" Neil rose instantly, drew her to her feet.

He took off his coat, drew it close about her shoulders. He would have kissed her, but she turned her face away. Something in the gesture arrested Neil.

"Eve!" he said. There was a questioning note in his voice. Suddenly Eve knew that she must tell him now, before he had built up an entirely untrue image of her in his thoughts. She turned to face him.

"I'm sorry, Neil. It's all a mistake!" "—you, it isn't—it wouldn't—oh, Neil, help me! Can't you wait until I'm sitting?" Neil adored you, but I don't really love you! "Love," she went on, gaining courage from the sound of her own voice, "is something different, I'm sure. When I said I'd marry you, I thought I loved you. But tonight—it came over me so quickly—I discovered that what I feel for you isn't love."

"Love," she went on, gaining courage from the sound of her own voice, "is something different, I'm sure. When I said I'd marry you, I thought I loved you. But tonight—it came over me so quickly—I discovered that what I feel for you isn't love."

Around New York

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—I read in the late edition of a New York newspaper last evening that young Mr. Orson Welles certainly had a "flair" for the unusual in his theatrical adventures.

Perhaps Mr. Welles does go sniffing around, nosing out this and that by the infatigability of his sense of smell, but without wishing to appear too pedantic I would like to suggest that Mr. Welles has a gift for creating disturbances rather than a "flair" for the unusual. The word flair means a sense of smell. It just happens that Orson Welles is a restless and imaginative egoist with a talent for splitting camps into divergent groups, inspiring arguments that wreck tried friendships of 20 years standing, and a manner as engaging and sometimes as impertinent as a slap in the face.

Very few people take Mr. Welles casually. You either admire him or detest him. When his Martian broadcast hoodwinked a lot of people several years ago, he made a passel of enemies. He made enemies in Hollywood and on Broadway and on the air, for he is all things to all forms of artistic expression, including acting, orating, writing, directing, criticizing, and soothsaying. He is a headline hog. It isn't his fault. He is a headliner by nature. His ways just happen to be different from other people's. He is altogether an extrovert, and he cares nothing for treading on anybody's feet, be they great or small.

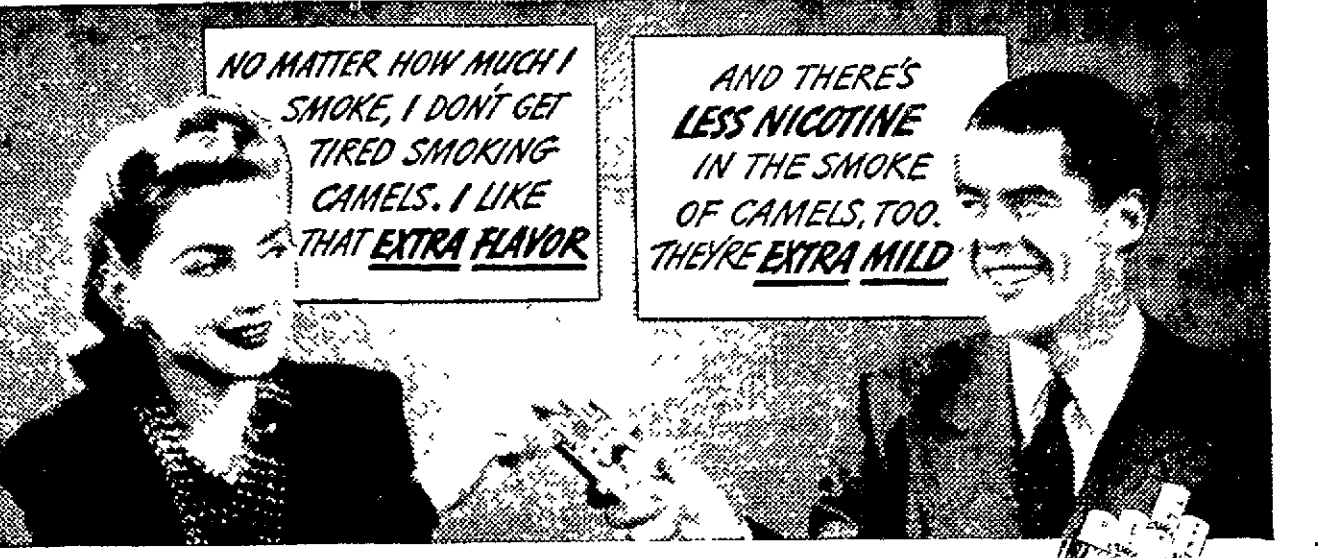

His last hand in New York is to be seen in the stage dramatization of the novel "Native Son."

As usual, there is a wide and sometimes violent difference of opinion as to the merits of this play. Most of the critics gave it strong approval. One makes the unqualified statement that Welles is a "genius." Another thinks the play, as such, loses the clumsy power that was the novel's chief charm.

But I for one am not a fan of race plays that must necessarily appeal to emotionalism and sensationalism. I cannot see that any good can come of them and I can see where a great deal of harm might be the result. "Native Son," as such, unfolds in ten scenes without intermission and is played in soft lights. All this is Mr. Welles' doing, and very effective it is. But with all its dramatic qualities, its measured tempo and its obvious sincerity, it is a raw and brutal business that wounds and leaves scars and yet in no sense contributes to the solution of a tragic and heart-breaking problem.

AFTER the play's successful premiere, Mr. Welles hung around for a day or two, accepting the congratulations of his friends, then flew back to Hollywood. One report says he is to go to Mexico City. Another says he will remain in Hollywood. And he says he will return to New York and give his undivided time to the drama. Probably all these will appear, or if any man can go to Mexico and Hollywood on a picture and radio chores while tenning exclusively in Manhattan added to the drama, Orson Welles is a "cat man." There isn't anybody else anywhere like him.

Letters to the Editor

R. D. No. 1, Tidoute, Penna. April 4, 1941

Editor Warren Times-Mirror, Warren, Pennsylvania.

Dear Sir Yesterday under plain cover with no return address I received through the mail a booklet called "God and the State."

This was supposed to be a religious booklet, but so far as I can see it is merely propaganda sent out to influence the people against our flag and our country. They complain about the custom of saluting the flag and according to their own definition of the word "salute means to greet with a kiss to bow and courtesy, the uncovering of the head, a clasp of the hand or the like."

If they think the salute to the flag wrong they must also believe it wrong to salute a dear friend or relative by a hand shake or any demonstration of affection. I do not believe that by holding our flag and our country in reverence we are placing them before God. We are commanded to honor our fathers and our mothers that our days may be long in the land which the Lord our God giveth us, and it is my honest belief that we should love and, if necessary, protect that land.

They condemn school boards who require the salute of the flag but, in a school director and secretary of the board feel that there is not enough patriotism and loyalty to our flag and our country being taught to our children, both in school and out. My husband and three brothers served their country in the first world war and I have not heard any regrets except that Germany should have been wiped off the map and so saved the second world war and much suffering. As a mother I believe that my children as well as all children in our great land should be taught love and respect for the flag as well as for their parents not to put them before God, but certainly next to Him.

ATTENTION SUBSCRIBERS If you do not receive your Times-Mirror regularly each evening, call the Western Union before seven o'clock and the paper will be delivered to you without extra charge.

We read of sabotage and communism in the larger cities and do not think so much of it, but when we find it lurking right here in our midst we begin to wonder where it will all end. So far as I am concerned, this booklet, "God and the State," is no more or no less than Communism and should be treated as such. If it was in good faith and the right thing, why was there no return address? This one sent to me will make the fire in my heating stove a little hotter for a many people can see these ships as they arrive and depart and before they are swallowed up in navy yard. It is also true that enemy agents can report these movements; but it seems to me only sportsmanlike that the keen American press refrain from giving a report of these ships for the benefit of Britain's enemies. At the present time this sort of reporting is of inestimable military value to the Germans.

"If a British warship arrives in a British yard for repair the fact does not appear in print, broadcast, or picture. The British people know how vital it is to keep that sort of information down to the minimum. Since the United States has promised to give all aid to Great Britain, so far as repairs are concerned, it seems to me that it is our patriotic duty to keep such information about British war vessels to a minimum.

"That minimum, in my way of thinking, is to print nothing. I sincerely believe the thoughtful press will agree with this opinion."

Hitler's High Command Admits Advance in Balkan Nations Is Meeting Hard Resistance

river valley near the Bulgarian frontier and had inflicted heavy losses on the Nazi ground troops in "one of the greatest epics in Greek history," but the Germans said they were continuing their advance.

Gen. Alexander Papagos, Greek commander-in-chief, issued an order of the day calling on his troops on the German front "to show that you are worthy of your fellow fighters on the Italian front."

The navy order of the day concluded: "Our slogan remains the same—disregard for death."

The Greeks claimed destruction of ten German tanks, five or six planes, and said a number of Nazi prisoners had been taken.

Berlin and Rome severed communications with the outside world for 24 hours as a military precaution. Service was restored early today. Yugoslav points, however, were still cut off.

German reports said great fires were raging in the "fortress of Belgrade" which the Yugoslavs said last week they would declare an open city in event of hostilities. The railway station area was smashed, bridges blown up, communications center damaged, and a troop train hit by bombs, they said.

Fran Kulovic, Yugoslav public works minister, was reported killed.

At least 81 Yugoslav planes were reported destroyed in air combat and by attacks on airports. Italian planes joined in the raids apparently along the Adriatic coast.

The Belgrade government was believed to have fled to Skopje, Vardar river valley city in southern Yugoslavia.

Apparently Serb tactics called for delaying battles in the north until the army could retire to the natural mountain defenses in the south and west.

Britain finally acknowledged landing a large army of English, Australian and New Zealand fighters in Greece to "stand in line with the soldiers of our brave ally in defense of their native soil."

There was no indication that British troops had entered the fighting as yet.

Stefani, the official Italian news agency, said Premier Mussolini's Fascist armies in Albania had frustrated an attempt by Greek troops to make contact with Yugoslav forces in two days of bitter fighting.

Stefani reported that the Italians had virtually wiped out a Greek division of three regiments. Athens reports said fierce air battles over the fighting ground troops today had cost the Germans at least 11 planes. It was also said that an irregular band of Bulgarians had joined in the battle this morning against the Greeks, but had been captured.

DNB, German news agency, asserted that Yugoslavia's whole transport and communications system had been "fatally" disrupted by Nazi warplanes.

Reports from Turkey said from 12 to 15 German divisions—about 180,000 to 225,000 troops—were pushing into Yugoslavia toward the Croatian capital of Zagreb from the old Austrian border 65 miles north.

Capital Raided Four Times In New Blitzkrieg

was being played by the air force. All German reports indicated the weather was favorable for air operations.

Beyond stating that the German army was already 30 to 40 kilometers (about 18 to 25 miles) on Yugoslav soil, German stuck to brief High Command communiques issued from time to time.

"On the southeast front, the attack is proceeding on schedule against stubborn resistance," the war bulletin said.

"Strong units of the air force are supporting the advance of the army by reconnaissance attacks on columns, positions and means of transportation of the enemy."

Authorizing sources explained that during a blitzkrieg little is said the first day or two. They also warned that the same miracles of the German army as in the French blitzkrieg should not necessarily be expected since the geography of Yugoslavia and Greece is such as to enable even poorly equipped hostile forces to hold up superior German temporarily.

They were careful to impress, however, that all these factors had been calculated by the German general staff and, therefore, even temporary delays could not change the final outcome.

The cardinal points of the compass are north, east, south, and west.

ON THE AIR

The East Side Business Boosters will be on the Breakfast Club program over Station WJTN, Jamestown, Thursday, Friday and Saturday mornings at 9:45, it was announced today.

"The barbaric invasion of Yugoslavia and the attempt to annihilate that country by brute force," he said, "is but another chapter in the present planned movement of attempted world conquest and domination."

Simultaneously the government moved to provide such assistance as it could to American citizens in the embattled country. The total of these could not be determined immediately, officials said. But more than 2,000 were reported to be in Belgrade alone.

Hull directed Arthur Bliss Lane, the United States minister, to remain with the Yugoslavian government whether it stayed in Belgrade or moved to some provisional capital, but he ordered the legation in Belgrade kept open at all times to take care of Americans who might need help.

The problem of transporting the materials to the Balkans was believed here not to be very great. Eight Yugoslavian ships were reported in American ports in the last few days. Three were at Baltimore, two at Philadelphia, one at Newport News, Va., and two at St. Thomas, Virgin Islands.

"That minimum, in my way of thinking, is to print nothing. I sincerely believe the thoughtful press will agree with this opinion."

MATSUOKA RECEIVED BY MOSCOW OFFICIALS

Moscow, April 7.—(AP)—Japan's traveling foreign minister, Yosuke Matsuoka, went to the red-walled Kremlin today after his arrival here from Berlin and was received by Vyacheslav Molotov, Soviet Russian premier and foreign commissar.

This was their second meeting. On March 24, when Matsuoka stopped here first on his way to the Axis capitals, he was received by Molotov in the presence of Joseph Stalin. That was a one-day stopover.

river valley near the Bulgarian frontier and had inflicted heavy losses on the Nazi ground troops in "one of the greatest epics in Greek history," but the Germans said they were continuing their advance.

Gen. Alexander Papagos, Greek commander-in-chief, issued an order of the day calling on his troops on the German front "to show that you are worthy of your fellow fighters on the Italian front."

The navy order of the day concluded: "Our slogan remains the same—disregard for death."

The Greeks claimed destruction of ten German tanks, five or six planes and said a number of Nazi prisoners had been taken.

Berlin and Rome severed communications with the outside world for 24 hours as a military precaution. Service was restored early today. Yugoslav points, however, were still cut off.

German reports said great fires were raging in the "fortress of Belgrade" which the Yugoslavs said last week they would declare an open city in event of hostilities.

The railway station area was smashed, bridges blown up, communications center damaged, and a troop train hit by bombs, they said.

Fran Kulovic, Yugoslav public works minister, was reported killed.

At least 51 Yugoslav planes were reported destroyed in air combat and by attacks on airports. Italian planes joined in the raids apparently along the Adriatic coast.

The Belgrade government was believed to have fled to Skopje, Vardar river valley city in southern Yugoslavia.

Apparently Serb tactics called for delaying battles in the north until the army could retire to the natural mountain defenses in the south and west.

British finally acknowledged landing a large army of English, Australian, and New Zealand fighters in Greece to "stand in line with the soldiers of our brave ally in defense of their native soil."

There was no indication that British troops had entered the fighting as yet.

Stefani, the official Italian news agency, said Premier Mussolini's Fascist armies in Albania had penetrated already into Greece by Greek troops to make contact with Yugoslav forces in two days of bitter fighting.

Stefani reported that the Italians had virtually wiped out a Greek division of three regiments.

Athens reports said fierce air battles over the fighting ground troops today had cost the Germans at least 11 planes. It was also said that an irregular band of Bulgarians had joined in the battle this morning against the Greeks, but had been captured.

DNB, German news agency, asserted that Yugoslavia's whole transport and communications system had been "fatally" disrupted by Nazi warplanes.

Reports from Turkey said from 12 to 15 German divisions—about 180,000 to 225,000 troops—were slashing into Yugoslavia toward the Croatian capital of Zagreb from the old Austrian border 63 miles north.

Large Crowd Is In Attendance At First Union Noon-day Holy Week Services

He reminded the audience of Jesus' response to the chief priests when they queried Him on His authority to teach the word of God, quoting many authorities in support of Jesus' relationship to the Father and the lack of any sinfulness in His life. Mr. Warren referred to His entry into Bethlehem "by the back door," as a tiny babe instead of as a triumphant king. His early days as a peasant carpenter. His preaching in the temple of the new and unlearned doctrine of God's love and mercy.

Arriving at the death of Jesus after He had been tried under the blasphemous laws and condemned to death on the cross, the speaker showed how the doctrine started by Jesus had spread throughout the world until today, the cross is no longer the symbol of degradation and defeat, but a sign of the glorious love of Jesus, revealing the purity and love of our Saviour to each man today.

To conclude the service, the hymn Crown Him With Many Crowns was sung and Major B. E. Finn, of the Salvation Army Corps, pronounced the benediction.

Tomorrow's speaker will be Rev. R. S. Naylor, Methodist pastor at Russell, his topic to be "The Day of Controversy."

Invaded Temples

MONDAY, APRIL 7. "And he went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold therein." Read Luke 19:41-48.

Commentators find one explanation of the hostility which hastened Jesus to the Cross in this cleansing of the temple. But he had no choice and needed no whip of small cords. His very presence rebuked the leaders of a great religion whose forms they used for shameful ends.

The sad thing was that this traffic, so the traffickers thought, served religion itself. Doves for the sacrifice, shekels for the collection plate, what could be more blameless? Ah, but these were "fifth columns"; greed came in under their cover and the clamor of the trader left no quietness for prayer. The temple had lost its soul.

Consider today the pity, beyond words, of violated temples, roofless churches, broken altars and their mute and moving judgment against our world. Consider religion used by pride and power for un-Christian ends. Consider the sanctuaries of the human spirit invaded by hatred and fears, and pray for the cleansing presence of the Master though He comes with scourging. For though He comes in judgment, He comes also with healing and to save us from ourselves.

PRAYER: Guard, O Lord, the fulness of Thy church from whatever may harm it. Sanctify those who, in love, come to greet the beauty of Thy house, and cleanse as need be the sanctuaries of our own souls. In His cleansing name. Amen.

SALVATION ARMY SERIES IS CONCLUDED
The final night of the Warren Salvation Army Corps' revival series proved a grand climax, with the largest attendance recorded locally for many months. The evangelist, Major Edwin L. Crosby preached on the subject "The Books Are Open" and Mrs. Crosby led an unusual period of praise and thanksgiving. Twenty penitents knelt at the penitential, 12 for renewal of covenants, and 8 new converts. The young people's band rendered valuable service and in addition to accompanying the congregational singing, gave an unusual selection with a theme "For You I am Praying", as arranged by W. A. Gullidge.

Major and Mrs. Crosby go immediately to Latrobe where they inaugurate a revival meeting at the Salvation Army corps tomorrow evening. This popular revival team has given exceptional service to Warren as a community, not only in services conducted but in family visitation, personal counsel in many individual problems and motherly and fatherly interest, spiritually.

Yugoslavs -- Face to Face -- Germans

PLANES The Germans have a tremendous advantage with perhaps two thousand first-liners concentrated on the Yugoslav frontiers against around one thousand mostly obsolescent ships for the Yugoslavs.

GUNS The might is mostly on the German side. The German big guns are probably the best in the world. Yugoslavs have some fair French and Czech makes, ought to make good use of them in mountain fighting.

MEN Here is where the Yugoslavs put their hopes. They are magnificent fighters and now face the Germans in a well-trained fighting force approaching 1,350,000 men as mobilization is completed.
